

I understand that some members of society are offended by some language or visual content. I myself really don't care what is on as long as people are made aware of the content. I agree with ratings it helps those who don't want to see certain content stay away from it. It also helps parents monitor what their child is exposed to. I have to say that myself along with many others are against the amount of censorship we already have to deal with. Censorship requirements should not be chosen or written by a group of people who are basing this on their beliefs. People should have the choice to watch what they want when they want. Any act of censorship is on equal footings with book burnings.
